Discussion:

3. In previous courses the casing exercise by the student was carried out the first weekend of the course. This exercise was transferred to the second weekend and provided additional time for the student to gather information and complete the report (see attachment 2). Several of the reports were above average.

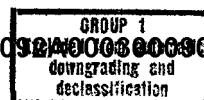

4. The Field "In-Box" problems were previously handled by each student and a written solution prepared. In this course, student groups were formed to study and discuss the problems. Each group presented the class with their various solutions to the situations. Student critique indicated this approach was thought-provoking. Several worthwhile solutions were presented.
